SCHOOL BOARD TO PROSECUTE

Local Board of Education will Make Trouble for Parents who Fail to Send their Children to School in Accordance with Law.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Gettysburg School Board held on Thursday evening the matter of enforcing attendance during the term just started was discussed at length. The compulsory law is enforced here for eight months beginning with October and after that time the Board intends to prosecute parents who do not send their children to school. It is proposed that an example be made of some of the most flagrant offenders and if that does not break up the practice others will be punished.

Attendance Officer Utz told the Board of people boasting that they would send their children to school "when they got ready" and of others who gave all sorts of foolish excuses for their children not being in attendance. Fines will follow, according to the sentiment of the Board, if this continues. Mr. Utz also talked of truancy. He is to be furnished with a badge showing his authority and will start work for this year at the beginning of the second school month.

Quite an amount of other business was transacted at the meeting. A large number of bills were ordered paid, consisting principally of those for supplies bought recently.

Prof. Burgoon asked what rate should be charged pupils from the townships attending the local schools. He was informed that the same rate as last year would hold, $2.00 per month in the High School and $2.00 per month in all other grades.

The matter of the part the schools are to take in Monday's parade was discussed. Prof. Burgoon reported that the teachers were strongly opposed to marching in the big parade with the orders and it was therefore decided that the schools meet at their respective buildings and proceed to the High School building before time for the exercises which are scheduled to take place at 1.30.

Mrs. Sallie Stewart was elected substitute teacher for the present term.

JACOB M. BONEBRAKE

Jacob M. Bonebrake, of Waynesboro, well known in the Western end of the county, died at his home Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, after a lingering illness from pulmonary trouble. He was aged 55 years.

About four years ago, Mr. Bonebrake suffered a slight cold, from the effects of which he never entirely recovered. Mr. Bonebrake was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bonebrake, the latter deceased. He was born on a farm one mile northeast of Waynesboro. Later he moved one half mile closer to the town where he engaged in farming. He was married twice. There were no children by his first wife. He was married the second time to Miss Sarah Mickley, of Adams county. They lived on the home farm for five years until Mr. Bonebrake's health became so bad that he was compelled to move to Waynesboro.

TOWN BOYS LOST IN MOUNTAINS?

Report Comes from Mont Alto that Two Boys Claiming Gettysburg as their Home Lost Way at Midnight in Mountains.

A few nights ago, about 12 o'clock, a party of campers near Mont Alto, found wandering in the park two young men, who eagerly asked for information as to the roads and the way to get out of the woods.

They had a horse and buggy which they had left while they hunted for assistance.

Their story was that they were from Gettysburg, had driven to the White Pine sanatorium and then had lost themselves on the road.

The story was not readily believed by the campers as they knew the young men would have been compelled to leave the sanatorium early in the evening and they could not understand why they had occupied four or five hours in driving down the mountain.

They directed the men to Mont Alto but inquiry there revealed that they had not appealed to any resident for shelter or food. What became of them is not known.

It is supposed by some Mont Alto people that they were two young men who ran away from their homes in Elizabethton. Two youths are missing from that place and their description fits the midnight travelers very well.

COHEE--ORENDORFF

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Vincent's Church, Midway, Thursday morning at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. A. Mahony. Edward Orendorff, of Quarry Hill, Lancaster County, brother of the bride, and Miss Jennie Orendorff, of Hanover, an aunt of the bride, were the attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Cohee left on a wedding trip to Washington and Georgetown, after which they will make their home at Sparrows Point, Md., where the groom is employed as a shipbuilder.

BURGLARS VISIT YORK SPRINGS

The York Springs postoffice was broken into by burglars some time on Tuesday night but nothing was taken. They gained entrance by prying open the rear door and ransacked the place but did not find any money. The miscreants also broke into the cellar at Emmert's store but could not gain entrance to the first floor and secured nothing of any value.

That night Charles J. Griest was ill and could not sleep and towards morning heard some noise at the rear of his residence. He called to Mrs. Griest who looked out and saw four men running away. An examination the next morning showed where the intruders had bored a hole in the window before being frightened off.

SUPPER TIME STOPPED GAME

Gettysburg Plays Colored Giants Tie Game, Features were Unusual Consisting Principally of Personal Remarks.

Gettysburg 10; Colored Giants 10; game called in the ninth inning on account of supper. In this way was ended one of the most entertaining exhibitions of the national game ever witnessed on Nixon Field.

The game played Thursday afternoon was replete with poor fielding, hard hitting, disputes with the umpire, personal remarks from the bleachers; arguments as to batting order, number of innings played etc., etc.

The gentlemen of the Third Ward came in strong in the early part of the game by batting Townsend over the lot and taking advantage of various errors, tallied up eight runs. Gettysburg in the meantime having scored six. At this point Hartzell was substituted for the Coatesville man and held the colored nine fairly well.

More runs were scored by the locals, and at the beginning of the ninth inning the tally stood Gettysburg 9, Giants 8. The Giants scored two more and led by one run when Gettysburg stepped up to the plate for their last bat.

Townsend opened with a base on balls reaching third while the next two batters went out. He attempted to steal home and was called safe, precipitating a heated argument which ended the game.

The clock pointed to supper time and it was decided to call off all further hostilities.

RUNAWAY

Fairfield, Sept. 3.—An ugly runaway accident occurred at this place on Thursday afternoon when a horse took fright at an umbrella. The buggy in which the horse was hitched was occupied by Mrs. George McLaughlin, Sr., her daughter, Mrs. Archie Marshall, and child who had driven out to see the base ball game between Fairfield and Cashtown. Suddenly the horse turned around and frightened at an umbrella. He dashed down the road, throwing all of the occupants to the ground and finally wrecking the vehicle by colliding with a telephone pole. The occupants of the buggy were only slightly injured. Dr. Glenn was near the scene of the accident and rendered attention.

CASHTOWN 3, FAIRFIELD 1

Cashtown, Sept. 3.—In a well played game of base ball on the Fairfield grounds Thursday afternoon Cashtown defeated Fairfield by the score of 3 to 1. Hit by pitched ball, by Lowe 1, by Swope 1.

FINE GRAPES

George B. Snively, of Shady Grove, is making quite a name for himself in the way of grape culture.

Several years ago Mr. Snively grafted a Morse early grape on a wild chicken grape stalk, and the result was an exceptionally fine blue grape. The most surprising part of the adventure in the last effort of the grower was that the first crop of grapes were seedless, and he seems unable to explain the cause. Since the first year, however, the grapes contained seeds.

Mr. Snively sent his new production to the agricultural department at Washington, D. C., and it was pronounced one of the finest specimens of grapes ever submitted to it.

TELEPHONES ON TROLLEY

Telephones have been installed in the cars of the York-Hanover trolley line and in a few days the poles where by connections can be made at any point along the line will be put on each car. The latter consists of a long light weight pole, something like a folding fish rod with a hook attached. This is hung on the telephone wire strung along the track, and the wire attached to the pole is connected with a plug at the telephone box and connection is secured anywhere along the line, thus avoiding the many delays by breakdown or lack of power. Often conductors were compelled to walk several miles to the nearest telephone to summon repairmen.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; THREE ARE DEAD

Dr. S. E. Schlegel, of Reading, Fatally Injured.

WAS STRUCK ON CROSSING

Market Train, Running at High Speed, Struck the Automobile and Hurled it to Side of Track—Was on Week's Trip.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 3.—A five-day automobile trip ended most sorrowfully, when the machine occupied by William L. Graul and wife, of Temple, and Dr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Schlegel was struck while crossing the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad at Douglassville.

Just as the auto got on the crossing the market train came along at a high rate of speed, striking the machine in the middle, and throwing it some distance down an embankment.

People rushed to the scene of the accident. They found Mr. Graul and his wife and Mrs. Schlegel dead. Dr. Schlegel lay near by, unable to move, having both legs terribly mangled.

The party left this city last Sunday on a week's trip, going directly to the Delaware Water Gap. They spent several days at that place, and Wednesday evening arrived in Philadelphia. They left Philadelphia for this city.

The bell at the crossing, it is said, was ringing as the automobile approached, but the occupants apparently did not hear it.

The automobile was hurled to the side of

Extraordinary Hair Tonic

It Won't Grow Hair on Bald Heads Unlike all other hair restorers, Parisian Sage won't grow hair on bald heads. Neither will it grow hair on china eggs, door knobs or hitching posts.

One claim is about as sensible as the other. If your head is bald and you want to cover it with hair, get a wig.

Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair rejuvenator, is of no use to bald headed people; but for people who have thin hair, falling hair and dandruff, and where the bald spot is just beginning to show, here is nothing in this wide world that will give such satisfactory results as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by People's Drug Store to drive out dandruff and stop itching hair in two weeks, or money back. It stops itching scalp in two days, and keeps the scalp cool and free from odors in warm weather.

There is nothing on earth that will so quickly turn dull, faded hair into lustrous and luxuriant hair as Parisian Sage. Try a bottle of Parisian Sage at People's Drug Store risk. Use it for a week, and you will have no use for the ordinary tonics. Parisian Sage is delightfully perfumed, free from grease and stickiness, and a large bottle costs but 50 cents. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

KILLS MOTHER, THEN HIMSELF

Pottsville, Pa., Youth Hid Body in the Attic.

COVERED IT WITH QUICK LIME

Hearing the Police Approach Sweetheart's Home, Murderer Puts Bullet Into His Brain—Mother Disappeared a Week Ago.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 3.—Without waiting to be accused of the murder of his mother, George Simons put a bullet in his brains at the home of his sweetheart, Miss Viola Hartranft, when he heard police officers approaching. Previous investigation showed that Simons had killed his mother a week ago and left her body in an attic, first stopping up the cracks in the door and then screwing the door shut with five screws and marking it "paint" so no body would touch it.

To add to the horror of the crime, Simons had covered the body of his mother with quick lime, hoping to destroy the evidence of his ghastly deed. Mrs. Simons disappeared last week. Young Simons told his father that his mother had gone to visit friends at Mahanoy City. Hearing nothing of the mother, the father then went to Mahanoy City and found she had not been there. He then came back and asked Chief of Police Davies to investigate.

The Simons house on North George street was searched. The door, sealed with paraffine, attracted the attention of Chief Davies and it was broken open. Mrs. Simons, who was fifty-eight years old, was found lying in the middle of the room. The body was so badly decomposed that it was difficult to tell just in what manner she was killed.

"I had no idea whatever of what was to occur," declared Chief Davies, "when we drove up and asked for young Simons at the home of his sweetheart. But as soon as he heard our voices, Simons, who was seated in an adjoining room, got up, excused himself to those present, and, going to the door, shot himself to death."

The motive for the murder is believed to be the gaining of a trifling sum with which it is believed, Simons expected to get married. He was a civil engineer. The murderer was an only son.

The former queen's birthday reception was the largest ever held in her honor.

PRESIDENT MAY VISIT ALASKA

Tells Gov. Clark He May Go There Next Summer.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 3.—President Taft, in bidding good-bye to Walter Ely Clark, who is to be inaugurated at Juneau as governor of Alaska Oct. 1, announced that he probably would visit the far northwestern territory next summer.

It is reported that if the president should go to Alaska next year he may extend his trip to include the Hawaiian islands.

Neither the president nor Secretary Knox would discuss the reported discovery of the North Pole. When the secretary was asked as to etiquette of what the state department ought to do with the pole, under the circumstances, he laughingly replied: "Annex it, of course."

President Taft has a little touch of sciatica, which may keep him off the golf links for the remainder of the week.

She was the first liner to dock on the fourth day out from Queenstown.

VERIFY FINDING OF NORTH POLE

Greenland Inspector Corroborates Cook's Discovery.

OWNERSHIP OF THE LAND

State Department Officials Think It of Little Consequence, as Land is Almost Inaccessible—United States May Not Attempt to Assert Sovereignty of Them.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Maurice F. Egan, the United States minister at Copenhagen, has telegraphed the state department that Dr. Cook's reported discovery of the North Pole has been corroborated by Dergaard Jensen, the Danish inspector of North Greenland.

The department is awaiting with great interest for further information from Minister Egan concerning the nature of the corroborative evidence which the Danish official possesses.

The feat was dramatic as it was amazing. It was a race with Peary across the northern ice that Cook won. With such light equipment as no other man had dared to carry into the far north, he set out, on the spur of a moment's whim, upon the daring dash that was to make the polar region territory of the United States, by right of discovery.

And the last 500 miles of the appalling journey he traversed without a single white companion—with but eight stolid Esquimaux, four sledges and twelve dogs.

One can imagine him at the moment of supreme achievement, alone in the vast reaches of northern wastes—the first man in all the unmeasured ages to set foot upon the hub of the whirling globe—a conqueror with none to share his conquest.

State department officials are of the opinion that it is of little consequence to the United States what lands Dr. Cook has discovered on his way to the North Pole, so far as actual territorial possession is concerned.

It is recalled by the department officials that ever since 1828 American explorers, in both the Arctic and Antarctic, have discovered vast areas of land to which no claims were ever made. Admiral Wilkes found in the Antarctic a territory of more than 60,000 square miles in area, and Dr. Kane made large discoveries in the Arctic, but no effort has ever been made by the United States to assert its rights to them. General Greeley some years ago located lands which never before were known to exist.

Many of the world's greatest navigators have, from time to time, made discoveries to which no claim was ever made. The principal reason for this, however, is said to be that these lands, in every instance, were almost inaccessible and absolutely of no value.

As to the particular territory which Dr. Cook is said to have discovered, the statement was made that it was quite probable that these lands would be found to be an extension of the mainland of Greenland, and if so, they belong to Denmark. At any rate, it is extremely improbable, it is said, that the United States would attempt to assert sovereignty over them.

Mrs. Cook Is Pleased.

Brunswick, Me., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Frederick A. Cook, wife of the explorer, declined to talk at length concerning her husband's achievement, declaring she did not desire notoriety.

"I am very glad that my husband has reached the pole and gained the chief desire of his life. I have always had great faith in the success of his undertaking, and have never for a moment felt he would not win."

She then said that she did not want any publicity whatever.

Burns Less Coal—Gives More Heat

Clinkers are not only troublesome, but very expensive. They clog and kill a fire, so that the coal only half burns, and very little heat is produced. The one sure way to be proof against clinkers, and to have steady, warm comfort in every room in your house, every hour in all kinds of weather, is to install a

PROFIT IN TREE FARMING.

Government Advice Which Will Help Owners of Forest Lands.

Unused lands in any part of the United States can be made to produce from $6 to $20 an acre, according to a recent forestry report by the government.

In the report the interests of the country in general are considered, and in this light tree growers are advised to keep their trees uncut until they are of mature size. "Plantations of red cedar twenty-five years old," says one report, "have netted $200.54 an acre. European larch, used for telephone or fence posts, will net from $200 to $225 an acre at the age of twenty-five years. White pine at the ripe age of forty years will produce $300 an acre as uncut timber," while other woods more than twenty years of age bring prices that compare favorably with these.

But to the man who is expecting that in ten or fifteen years his tree crop will reach a salable value the figures of the national forest service are a bit out of reach. Yet to that individual hope is offered in the announcement that there are uses and even good prices paid for trees which range from the tender age of six years up and that the demand for these slender stripplings is growing greater each year.

An example of this lies in the match industry alone. This line of manufacture has nearly all been merged into a great trust which annually purchases at a good figure thousands of acres of white pine trees anywhere from Maine to California. It buys these as uncut timber in size from six inches up and after clearing the tract moves on to its next forest. In the manufacture of barrel staves and hoops trees of almost any tough, flexible wood are used from the ages of four to fifteen years, while any straight young trees of ten years will make salable flag or tent poles.

Young alders, poplars and willows of from ten to fifteen years serve mankind in the manufacture of gunpowder, while the prolific beech and maple, from six inches in diameter upward, can be used in the manufacture of wood alcohol, for which there is an enormously increasing demand all over the country. Furniture manufacturers, always on the outlook for wood with a fine grain, will take birch, cherry, walnut, etc., not large enough to be used in making parts of house furnishings for use as veneer. Never before in the history of the United States has so much wood been used in the manufacture of ornaments and toys as is now being used for that purpose, and thousands of feet of spruce are employed by manufacturers of sleighs and wagons.

In some parts of New York and Pennsylvania large quantities of small timber are used in wood distillation plants for the production of acid, while all over the country small timber is used for the manufacture of charcoal. Small sizes of timber, particularly the spruce of New England, is used in the pulp mills where paper and other wood pulp products are manufactured. Then, again, many small trees are bought for the manufacture of toothpicks, while in the mining country of Pennsylvania and other coal producing states thousands of "sprags" are purchased to serve their peculiar purpose. This is to check the speed of the mule carts as they go rapidly down the steep grade of the mines by being thrown beneath the wheels.

These are only a few of the hundreds of uses to which young timber may be put if it is near enough to a market to be sold.

A Minnesota feeder has a good word to say for the Jerusalem artichoke, a distant cousin of the wild artichoke which has proved a pest in many a tilled field. He has found that horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and goats like the tubers and even eat the leaves, while some feeders use the tops as silage. He suggests the artichoke as a ration along with alfalfa or clover pasture, the animals being finished for market with an added ration of ground oats and peas, wheat or barley. Farther south corn would naturally be the finisher.

Many a farmer in sections where the usual rainfall is ample, but likely to be a little short during the latter part of July and August, might well learn a helpful lesson from the irrigation farmer of semiarid sections of the west, who, shortly after flooding his orchard or other cultivated crop, at once proceeds by careful cultivation and harrowing to make a mulch of the mellow soil on the surface and thus retain the moisture which the soil has been given with much pains on his part. The principle holds as well whether the moisture comes from a ditch or falls from the clouds.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A VIRGINIA EPISODE.

By HARRIET CAMBEY.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

During that period when the armies of the Confederacy and of the north were swaying back and forth in Virginia, while in command of the 4th New York volunteer infantry, I was advanced one evening into territory that had been previously held by the enemy. Near me was a house, and from the inmates I received an invitation to supper. I accepted and found a lady and her daughter, the rest of the family, consisting of two sons, being in the Confederate army. I will call them Mrs. and Miss Bates. Considering that the blockade had deprived them of all table supplies except such as could be raised in the south, they gave me a very fair meal, made up of the only chicken left by the "Johnnies" and the delicious hot bread that southern women know so well how to make.

I was then twenty-eight years old and considered myself passably attractive to women. There can be no immodesty in my now saying so, since the wrinkled, white-headed old man of today is not the same bodily person as the young soldier of 1863. I had seen those southern girls fall precipitately in love on sight with our Yankee boys and was not especially taken aback when Clara Bates showed a sudden admiration for me.

The young lady confined the expression of her attraction for me to her eyes and her speech. She would not permit me even to touch her hand. She seemed troubled at the proximity of two hostile armies, declaring that, though her sympathies were with the Confederates, she hoped they would retreat farther south. I set myself to work to draw from her any information she might possess of the enemy's intentions, and she told me that a southern general whom she spoke of familiarly as Bob and who had left her only that morning had expressed an opinion that it would be some time before he would see her again. Considering this to indicate a further retreat, I was about to take my leave for the purpose of reporting it at once to my general when I heard from the next room the words, spoken in Mrs. Bates' own voice:

"Kiss me again, Bob."
Darting a glance at my companion, I saw the blood rushing into her face. Then she started up to leave the room; but, grasping her wrist, I detained her. Immediately from the same room as before came a succession of snatches. Miss Bates made another effort to free herself, but I laughingly held her, saying:

"This is far too interesting to lose. Please sit still."
"Clara! Sweetheart!" came another voice, this time a man's, but sounding rather as if it issued from a phonograph than a human being, followed by a lot of unintelligible creaking.

Miss Bates writhed, but by this time I had both her wrists in my grasp, and she could not get away. I held her for perhaps five minutes, waiting for something more from the adjoining room. Presently it came in a masculine voice:

"All together! Surprise 'em! Two o'clock!"
At this the heightened color left my prisoner's face, and she turned pale. I would not now let her go on any account. It must have been five minutes before more came. Then it was:

"Goodby, sweetheart! Goodby! Goodby!"
There was a long wait after this, and I was beginning to fear there would be no more when I received another installment, still in the masculine line:

Releasing my prisoner, I left her with a derisive "Goodby, Clara!" and, directing that a guard be immediately thrown around the house that there might be no communication from it with the enemy, I rode at once to the corps commander.

"General," I said, "I have just passed through an experience which I interpret as follows: I have been entertained by a southern girl who purposely gave me false information that the enemy in our front would again retreat. There I learned, doubtless from a parrot in an adjoining room, which had been used either for a council of war or from which orders were issued, that we will be attacked before daylight in the morning; though what morning I can't inform you. Tomorrow seems most likely."

"Thanks, colonel," replied the general. "We'll take the precaution to be under arms every morning."

It was half past 2 the very next morning that an attack was made on our right, re-enforced by artillery, followed by infantry, all along the line. But as soon as the enemy saw that we were under arms and ready for them they ceased firing and gradually withdrew. We followed and gained a substantial advantage.

What interested me after the fight was to learn the name of the Confederate general who attempted to turn our right. This I had no difficulty in doing from prisoners captured on the field. From them I learned that the general was one of the youngest and most attractive in the Confederate service, that he commanded a division in a corps commanded by his uncle and that his first name was Robert.

Ten years after the war ended, having occasion to visit Virginia, I sought out the house in which the episode had occurred. Miss Bates had married General "Bob." I wrote a note asking permission to call and was entertained hospitably by the couple.
